A spiritual Journey towards Birthing the Christ with Your Divine
Mother and unlimited Abundance

Guardian Angels – The Ego – The highest self – The Divine Mother

A message of hope from Archangel Metatron

If this message has found its way to you, then you have either reached, or on your way to a crisis point in your life. You are standing at a crossroads, and it is a time for reflection, patience and healing not harm, for some of the roads that you are thinking of walking down are dark enough that only your shadow can be seen. No matter how hard you try, you cannot see any future with a happy outcome, so what is the point in trying? Being happy shouldn't be this difficult?

Without any blame or judgment, the reality is that for you to be so unhappy, you have been living a life that is not aligned with your soul's purpose, for a very long time. You have forgotten that your only reason for being here is as an expression of love and abundance and like so many before, you have been duped by the illusion of this world and led down a false path that promised so much. I once walked on this earth as a human, and I understand what a difficult path it is to take, but the pain you feel is for a reason. It is your soul shouting at you that it is time to rebuild and start again. Who you are truly meant to be has always been within you. Hidden beneath the layers of pain, loneliness, low self-esteem and fear of change is your soul's purpose, trying to break free and experience love, peace and the unlimited potential to achieve your dreams. Your pain is not a call to leave but a call to stay. It is a beacon of hope calling you home to your true self.

If I told you that there is a reset button and at any moment you can begin again, a clean slate, would you press it? You have forgotten that you hold a powerful connection to the universe within you. This connection means just one positive thought and intention to heal yourself today, is enough to change the course of your life and future right now!

You may think your life is heading in a direction that you cannot change, but this is not true. The very reasons that you want to leave this world are the very reasons the world needs you to stay. A selfish person would not worry if they were failing, they would blame everyone else and carry on regardless, but you blame only yourself. Your capacity to feel things so deeply is proof that you care, and people who care have enormous capacity to do great things and you can do great things! Let spirit guide you to healing, understanding the reasons for all the experiences you have had in your life, and uncover your soul's purpose, unlocking your ability and divine right to the creative power of the universe! You no longer need to search for the answers to your prayers they have always been within you. There is no magic wand that can erase the past, but if you are prepared to take the leap of faith, healing can bring purpose to your pain and bring magic to the present and that is Gods gift to you. 'We all need your beautiful, kind, and sensitive soul in this world; we just need you to believe this too!

How to follow the course

This book is a safe space for anyone who is low in confidence or new to the genre of self-help. You may be feeling anxious about taking a spiritual path and how you will change or simply overwhelmed about this new world and the amount there is to learn. Within Acceptance, there is a clear routine and structure to explore complex ideas in a way that does not feel intimidating. It has a school workbook style of teaching. Every lesson links to another to create a buildable course; exercises have clear instructions to follow, and the purpose of each lesson is broken down into manageable chunks of information to follow at your own pace. It is visual and colourful, with lots of practical ideas and activities that you can integrate into your day, making your learning both holistic and relevant. Embodying the very essence of your learning (which I call becoming by doing) is the most effective way to accelerate your healing.

Deep down at a soul level you are already familiar with the content of this course, but years of conditioned thinking have caused a type of spiritual amnesia. Repetition is key to awakening those dormant spiritual muscles. With practice you can activate them just like muscle memory does when you return to an exercise or hobby you know so well after a long break. Together we can change the way you view yourself, your situation and the world around you to the point where you can really believe anything is possible.

Every lesson within Acceptance will be broken down into three parts:

Morning Intention, which is a simple Angel prayer for connection and support, setting the intention for the day ahead.

Daytime Focus has easy to follow exercises with clear instructions, to help you integrate new perspectives and healthier habits into your work or home life

Evening contemplation replaces screen time with positive thought-provoking exercises and discussion to alter your mindset before sleeping. It is an opportunity to think about how you felt about your day and then explain the focus within the learning goals of Acceptance.

Lessons will be:

- The Open Door
- Leaving the mind behind
- The Fight of your life!
- The Invisible Hand – Ego and the Highest Self
- A Mothers Love
- The Life review
- Hello/Goodbye
- No is the new Yes
- Intuitive Self-care
- The 3-5-7 Rule for creating self-belief

- Becoming By doing

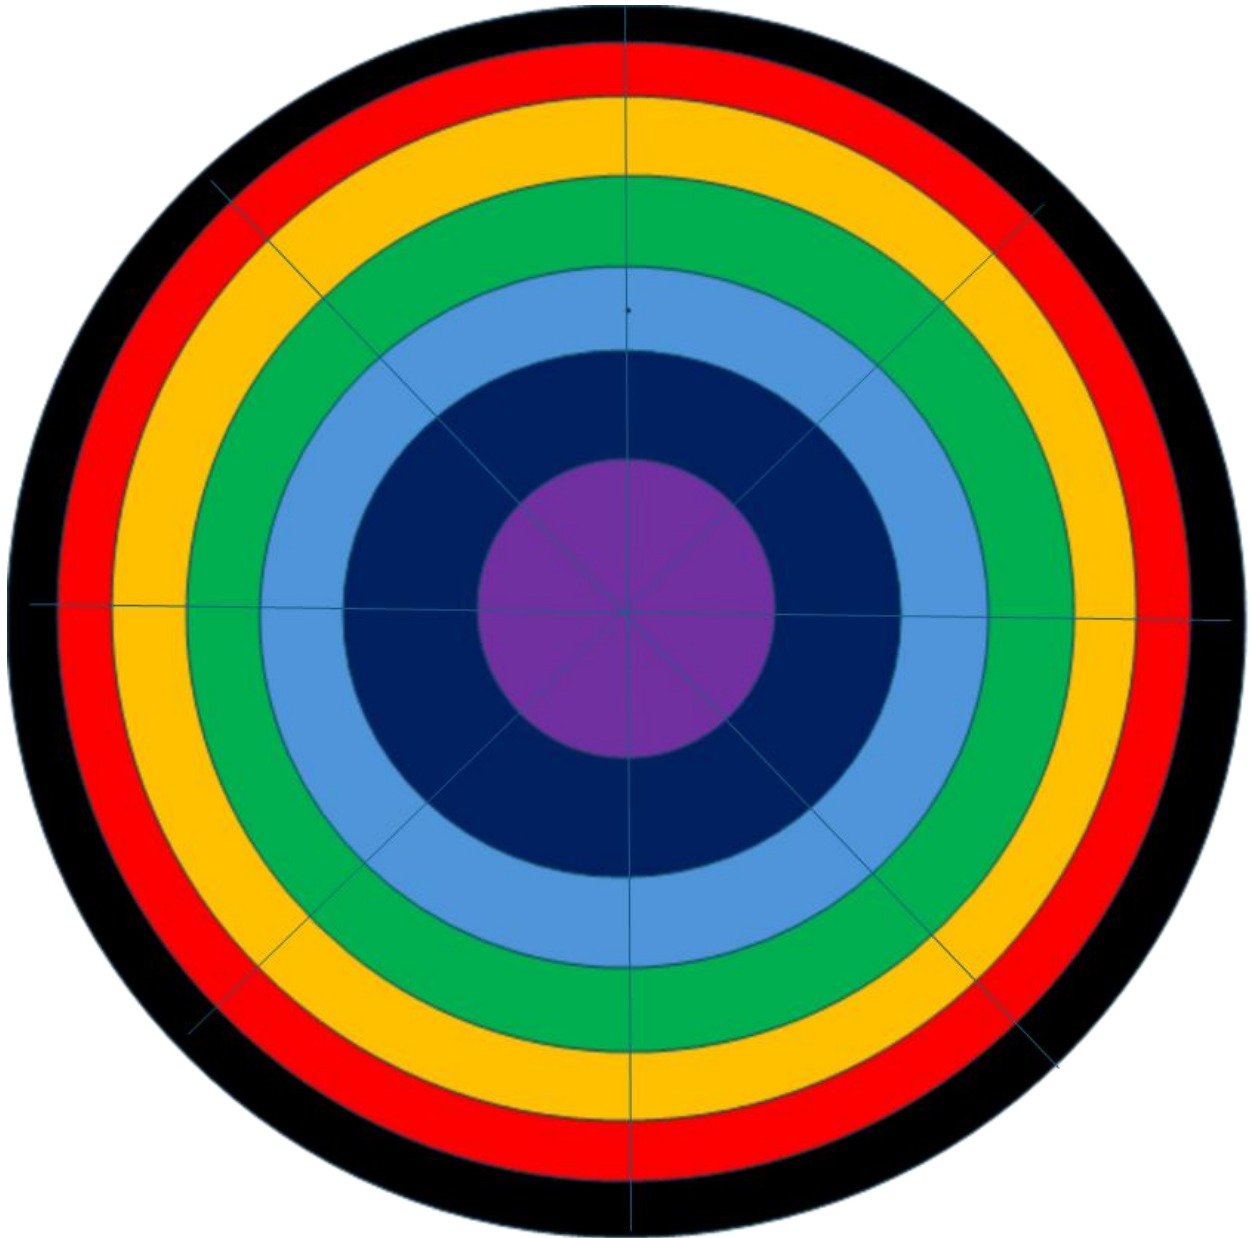

The life Doula Wheel

You may have wondered what the bright wheel on the front cover represents. Using colour, the life doula wheel is designed to help you track your progress of Birthing Joy Releasing Pain. Each ring represents a cycle of healing that when completed will bring you closer to birthing your inner Christ and revealing your true divine self

- For quick reference, the accompanying chart shows the cycle of change you are going through, what stage of birthing you are, who is helping you in spirit, their role and the outcome.
- The Black ring on the wheel represents the farthest point away from the center of the wheel and remembering God you are in this cycle. It represents a dark moment of crisis when you feel alone and disconnected from yourself. Often referred to as a dark night of the soul, it is rock bottom and a moment of choice to surrender to the process of healing, deconstruct and rebuild. Whether or not you choose to find peace through healing is up to you and you will always be loved by God no matter what you decide, but Karma is a self-perpetuating truth that you will circle back again to this moment in this lifetime or the next, until you allow yourself to receive healing and love.
- The Red ring on the wheel is the cycle of Acceptance and where this course begins. Red represents a time to stop and the Root chakra, which is the lowest of the seven chakras, and on the Life Doula Wheel it represents the point when you are living your life mostly or only from your human self. This is why you will notice most of the language and exercises within Acceptance are built around the human minds' perspective of life to ease the path to spiritual thinking.

What is Acceptance?

The purpose of acceptance is to allow yourself permission to slow down and stop, reassess your life, so that you can shift your direction and focus back to your destined path and prepare you to receive what is truly yours. The course will guide you to look at your life with a new perspective and explore what is holding you back and support you to make the changes you need to move your life forward and discover your soul's purpose.

To achieve the peace and joy you have been without for so long will require a huge shift in your current mindset and undoing years of conditioned thinking. This task is not to be underestimated, and there is a lot of work to do, but acceptance is giving you all the practical and spiritual tools you need to form the new habits that will help you to achieve this, creating a wonderful new life you never thought was possible or that you deserved.

At the end of Acceptance, you will be able to:

- Open your heart and mind to the idea of guidance and support
- Communicate effectively with your guardian angel
- Gain an understanding of your soul & inner Child and how to work with them.
- Build inner resilience and courage to move out of your comfort zone.

Guardian angels for beginners

Before I introduce to you the topic of your Guardian Angel, I want to write a few words about Archangel Metatron who sent you a message of hope at the beginning of this book. You may already be aware that there are Archangels as well as guardian angels, and in fact there are many levels of angels. This course is for beginners on the spiritual path, so I will only concentrate on connecting you to your Guardian Angel but occasionally in the process of writing, a message will come through to me, which is the case with Archangel Metatron. He is a powerful figure in Jewish mystical texts considered the scribe of heaven who recalls humanity's choices in the Akashic Records. He is associated with spiritual ascension and bridging the gap between heaven and earth. Metatron is unique among archangels because he once walked the earth as mortal in the form of Enoch. He acts as a mediator between God and humanity, and he takes a particular interest in anyone on earth who is actively taking steps towards ascension, healing, redirection and becoming a bridge between heaven and earth themselves, which is why he wanted to contribute a universal message of hope to those that need it today.

Most people do not realise or believe they have their very own guardian angel that has been with them since the day they were born and will remain by their side throughout this lifetime and beyond. Films, stories and songs about angels are woven into our culture, 'It's a Wonderful Life' for instance, we all know who Clarence is and what he did to bring George Bailey back from despair and the closing line 'every time a bell rings and angel gets their wings'. At some point in our lives, we have all either thought or said in passing "You must have a guardian angel looking after you?" When we hear of someone's lucky escape from a situation or good fortune but never think any more about it, but what if? What if we all have a guardian angel watching over us, ready and waiting to help us navigate life's choppy waters to find peace and calm within.

I am going to tell you that you do, and your guardian angel's sole purpose and reason for being is to love you unconditionally and guide you to experience love and joy and reach your full potential. Often in life we can feel abandoned, lonely, and that nobody understands what we are going through. Your guardian angel knows you better than you know yourself and is available 24/7 for support. This is a precious untapped resource that you are missing out on!

What do they look like and what if I cannot see my guardian angel?

I have read accounts of people blessed enough to see angels, and it sounds wonderful, but not being able to see your guardian angel is the experience for most people including myself, but I do hear and feel them. Deciding to go on faith and trust alone when reaching out to my guardian angel was my foot in the door to spirituality as beginner and the first steps towards something bigger than I could have ever imagined.

I have always found it difficult to lower my barriers and allow love in and even to love myself, so the fact that I had to become open and vulnerable to trusting what I was feeling rather than seeing has enabled me to build an irreplaceable connection to my guardian angel. I now realise that this was the lesson I had to learn. When I started on this journey, I was very self-critical, resulting in disappointment when I couldn't see my guardian angel. It was not helping me to connect and keep the faith that angels existed at all! As informative and inspirational as they were, I decided to step back from the masses of online information and books about angels and find my own simple but effective way to connect, that I hope will help you too. I have read and heard many accounts of what an angel looks like, and I believe these are all true because my angel has told me that they appear and communicate with their person in a way that best suits the relationship and the situation. It is a very individual and personal way of connecting, unique to you and your guardian angel. An angel may appear in the form of white feathers, flashes of light to full figures with recognisable angelic features, sometimes accompanied by a differing frequency of sounds, ringing bells and angelic music and even touch. They can also be either masculine or feminine in energy. This all depends on the type of connection you have and what your angel needs to assist you with. Angels do not have a gender in the way we understand it as humans. Angels and humans alike all possess masculine and feminine energy within us regardless of biological sex. We lean into our feminine energy when we use our creativity and intuition and the more nurturing energies and our masculine when we assert ourselves and take decisive steps towards our goals. My only experience of seeing an angel was at a time when I was experiencing loss after my mother passed away. I remember waking up in the night to see a wave of golden lights like glitter dust reaching out to me from the other side of my bed. I had no knowledge of the existence of angels at the time; I was so scared that I turned over and squeezed my eyes shut. I now know this was an angel sending healing to me, but at that time I was not ready to see. That was 15 years ago, and they never appeared again in that way. I sometimes wish I could go back and appreciate the beauty of that moment, but I will never forget the sparkling golden swirls of light that are forever imprinted in my memory. On reflection it had to be this way so that I could help all the people that doubt the existence of angels because they cannot see them. I am here to tell you that the bond of love between my guardian angel and myself is very real. I cannot see her, but she can see me, and that's good enough. This is what I am meant to share with you. Taking a leap of faith and trusting what you cannot see will change your life. Feeling really is believing!

How did you get your guardian angel?

A guardian angel is a being created of pure love, light, and energy that is only capable of loving you. As you progress through this course, you will learn that before you came to earth you were also created in the same way with the sole purpose of expressing love to yourself and others. For this reason, your soul and guardian angel were drawn to each other before you were born and took human form. The decision on how you are matched with your guardian angel is based upon the compatibility in the frequency between you. For your guardian angel to provide the best support and guidance, there must be a knowing and complete understanding of your essence like twins or best friends do. The energy I feel from my angel is very feminine, nurturing but also childlike, very much like my own. Once this connection is made, it can never be broken. Throughout all your lifetimes your guardian angel is literally stuck to you like glue, and there is nothing you can do that will ever change this. You may hear some people say that God matches you to your angel and this is also true because angels are an extension of God (as are we) therefore God is working through them all the time so when a match is made it is you, your angel and God working as one. There is no need for words and discussion; this is all done on an energetic level. You are matching the frequencies of love between you.

What does the bond with your Guardian Angel feel like?

Finding unconditional love difficult to accept was the moment I realised how much healing work I needed to do, but it has changed my life! The biggest barrier between a person and their guardian angel is free will. We have free will over our thoughts and deeds, to make mistakes or take advice. Your guardian angel cannot interfere with this and is limited to how much they can help you unless you give permission and ask. I could write pages about situations that I have faced in my life and somehow still come out on the other side. I would survive but I was always left feeling a little bit more depleted physically and mentally than the last. I would say the biggest difference my guardian angel has made in my life is knowing they are always there to give me comfort when I am afraid to face something difficult alone and the courage to do so. The moment I connected to my guardian angel and gave them the green light to support and love me, the difficult decisions made and the fear and sadness I have since faced, I have done so feeling more loved, empowered and stronger each time. In my past I felt as if I was shrinking and disappearing through the cracks of life but now every challenge I face, I grow and expand as the roots of my happiness reach far and wide. I can honestly say with my guardian angel by my side there is nothing that we cannot achieve together!

If you can drop your shields and allow the full force of your angels' love to come through, it really feels like falling in love. It is not like romantic love, but you can feel butterflies in your stomach and fluctuate between peace, contentment and giddiness through the joy of your connection. What you are really doing is remembering the close bond you formed before you came to earth. It is rekindling and a reunion. You have always loved each other. Your time on earth has caused you to forget, but your guardian angel never left your side. Hello, old friend!

Guardian Angel Communication /Hints & Tips

As I've mentioned, the way you communicate with your Guardian Angel is deeply personal. Your Angel already knows you - how you think, what you watch, what music moves you, where you like to go, and what you enjoy doing, and they will use everyday moments like these to get your attention and share guidance. The first hurdle is the human mind: overthinking and doubt can block the signals and messages and stop you from noticing what's being offered. As you practice opening up and connecting (and as you work through the exercises in this book), you'll begin to feel more relaxed and confident. Over time, you and your Guardian Angel can develop a kind of "shorthand" a simple, recognisable way of exchanging yes/no answers or gentle nudges. For example, if I ask, "Should I go this way?" and I hear a high-pitched frequency in my ear, I'll acknowledge it immediately and accept it as a "yes." and ask for confirmation. Start with easy non-urgent questions so that you can practice and understand the answers. Once you respond with trust and recognition, your Angel will often use the same sign again because it works for you.

Similarly, if I hear a song on the radio that feels meaningful in the moment, I'll say, "Thank you I received that," and I'll invite my angel to use music again if they wish. Other common signs can be repeating numbers, a film title that answers a question you've been holding, or a phrase that seems to appear at exactly the right time. Your Angel will try different methods, and whatever you respond to, whatever you notice and acknowledge they will build on. You can also be specific. You might say, "Today I'm watching out numbers, if you'd like to send me a message that way, I will pay attention". This works very well. In my own experience, I noticed loud ringing in my right or left ear during certain conversations. Over time, I realised my left ear tended to respond to themes like creativity, intuition, feelings, and emotions, while my right ear tended to respond to action, decisions, and direction. I came to understand the right ear as more masculine energy (drive, determination, and taking action) and the left as a more feminine energy (nurturing, intuition). Noticing these patterns helped me understand the messages more clearly.

The other method I've found very effective is learning to work with oracle decks and tarot cards. If you're new to this, I recommend starting with oracle cards first because they're less intimidating and usually come with a guidebook that explains each card's meaning, so you can interpret messages quickly and with confidence. Tarot cards rely heavily on symbolism, and this includes the numbers on each card 1-10. This is a great way to understand angel numbers which are repeated numbers that you see, as a message for you. It is also an amazing tool for healing, communication, and planning your next steps. Although it can take a little time to learn, it's truly worth it, and it's a lot of fun. You can also create your own deck using blank index or revision cards and writing messages on them. These might be simple "yes," "no," and "maybe" cards, as well as more specific prompts for yourself. For example: "Be kind to yourself today," "Practice self-care," or "Stop overthinking." You might be amazed at what rises to the surface when you give your intuition the time and space to communicate your highest good back to yourself. These are some of my own examples and they may be something that you experience too but every relationship between a person and their Guardian Angel is very unique and personal so have fun, experiment, take note of everything to build the pattern of communication. Remember you are not strangers, communicate like you would a friend or family member, because you are!

Introduction

The open door is your first lesson and the moment you take the pen to the blank page and rewrite your story. Its main purpose is to help you understand that you are always loved, held, and supported by spirit to take your life in a new direction. This is the most important lesson you can learn because allowing yourself to be open to receive and connect to loving guidance is central to this course and allowing miracles to be delivered. You cannot find hope alone, but together we can. There are some lovely exercises and reading sections that will support you throughout this lesson with emphasis on the special relationship you have with your Guardian Angel. Hopefully you have read the beginner's guide to guardian angels. If not, please do so as it will give you an idea of what you are connecting to. This course is designed feel like a safe space to explore new ideas and trusting that you have a guardian angel is a gentle first step in this new world. The simplest way to connect is to say hello. Your guardian angel has been waiting a long time to hear you say those words! It is simple but effective and will make their hearts sing with joy!

Morning Intention

Angel prayer for connecting

As you build confidence in your connection to your angel, you will find yourself chatting away all through the day without any embarrassment, but for the first time it is nice if you can set aside some time and space to have a few moments undisturbed. The edge of the bed as you wake up or in the bathroom before you shower, anywhere is fine. Speak naturally just like an old friend you are catching up with after a long time. If you feel uncomfortable or silly speaking out loud in the beginning, you can write it down in a note, whisper or say the words in your head; they can see and hear everything! Do not worry about getting anything wrong, angels do not think in the way humans do, they do not concern themselves with right and wrong, they only work with the frequencies of love and therefore loving thoughts and intention, this is the barometer they use for measuring our emotional and spiritual needs. They are just so happy to hear from you, so, express anything that comes to mind, but this is a nice example for your first connection.

‘Hello, my guardian angel’

‘It has taken me a while to be ready and open’

‘But it is so lovely to speak to you today’

‘I would like to invite you to spend today and every day with me’

‘I am ready and open to listen to your guidance and allow you to love and support me in everything that I do’

‘All my love’

That is all you need to do for your first meeting; it is that simple! Next, I am going to show you how to perform a simple but effective breath work exercise for any time you feel fearful and overwhelmed. I would like you to try this after you have connected to your guardian angel to help you relax for the day ahead.

Angel Breath work for fear

Although this is a breathing exercise for fear, this is first and foremost about love. In your mind, see your guardian angel with huge wings of love surrounding you. Now, give them your fear. Breathe out the fear and breathe in their love. They will recycle the fear and turn it into healing much like plants do when they change carbon dioxide into oxygen for you to breathe healthier air.

The technique

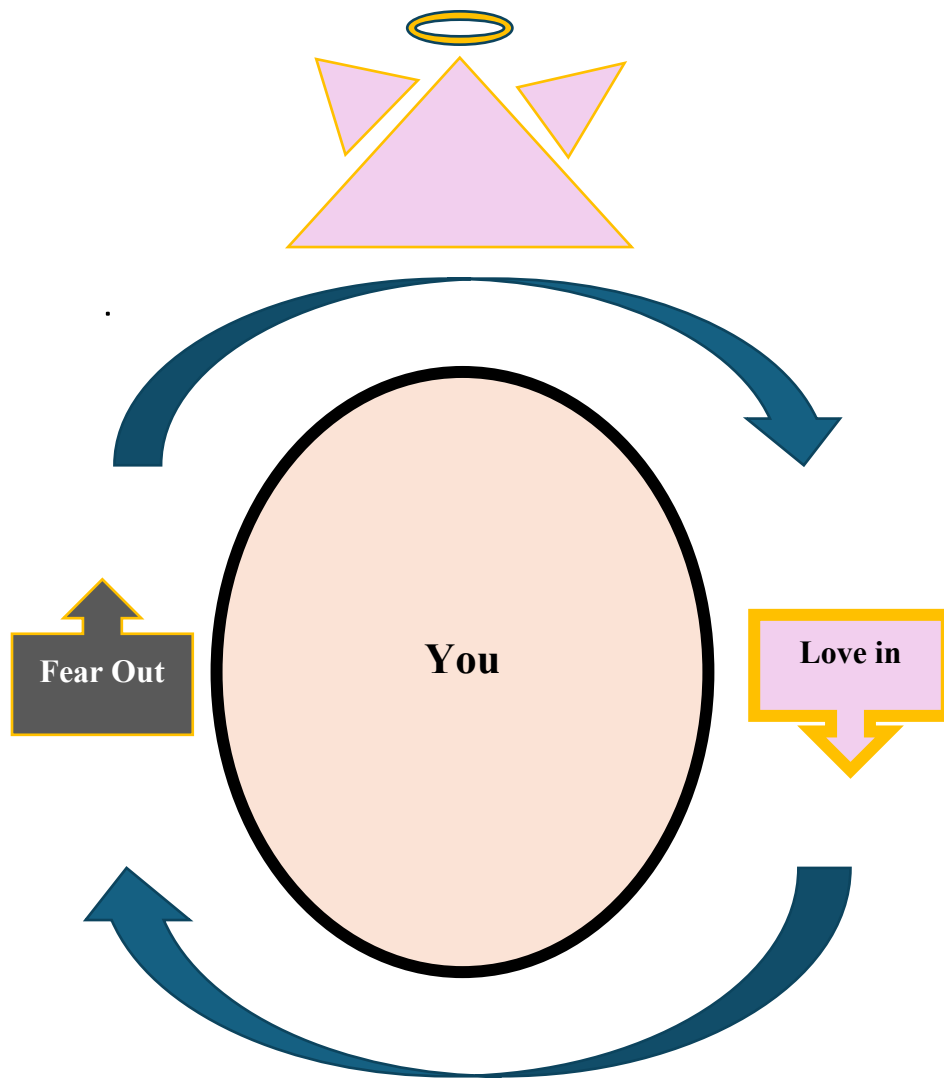

Our instinct when we breathe in is to expand into our chests, but I want you to expand your belly like you are inflating a balloon.

1. Take a lovely, controlled breath in through your nose, taking the air and all the love surrounding you deep into your belly and feel it gently expand.
2. Then breathe out all the air slowly and controlled through your mouth, deflating your belly until there is no more breath – repeat until you feel relaxed. It may help to place your hands on your abdomen to feel it inflate and deflate whilst saying to yourself ‘I breath in the love and breath out the fear.’

Abdominal breathing is a more effective way to take in oxygen and relax the nervous system; it also takes a little bit more concentration, which distracts your mind. Spiritually this area is one of the seven chakras or energies points of the body known as the solar plexus. I won't expand this too much at this point, as I want to keep things as simple as possible at the start of your spiritual journey, but if you are curious, you will find a helpful beginner guide to the seven chakras at the back of the book. Very simply the solar plexus point around the naval area is symbolised by the colour yellow and fire. It governs will power/determination, self-belief and how you view yourself. The expression ‘fire in the belly’ is a familiar way to describe someone with passion and purpose. When this area is blocked, you will be feeling the opposite of this and experiencing more fear-based emotions. This was a light bulb moment for me because I have always experienced nausea, sickness, and even pain in my stomach when feeling anxious about something, such as pushing myself out of my comfort zone or anticipating an upcoming event. Is this something that you have experienced? The combination of deeper breathing into the abdomen whilst you visualise the angelic exchange of fear to love is a powerful tool in your kit bag. I use this on a regular basis even when I am not experiencing any negative emotions as a nice way to connect to my guardian angel and have a few moments of stillness.

Learning tip

If you are a visual learner and prefer to use imagery over words to understand something, the use of colour is a quick and easy way to express yourself at any time. For this exercise instead of saying the words fear and love you can visualise a colour for each to represent the breath, for example, I would imagine pink as my angel's love and grey, brown, or black as my fear depending on how intense the feelings were in that moment. Paint colour palette charts that are free in DIY stores or to view online are a great way to explore how colours make you feel

Watch point

With any of the above exercises, do not spend too long thinking about what your guardian angel may look like, their colours or features. These details do not matter at all and will distract you, but light or wings surrounding you is a simple and familiar visualisation if you need one. The focus point throughout this book should always be on the feeling the exercise gives you rather than the details.

Day time Focus

Keeping the connection open throughout the day

Now that you have made the connection, I would like you to try your best to keep the dialogue open throughout the day. Whether you are busy at work, shopping, cooking or just at home alone, take any opportunity to think about your guardian angel by your side, helping you with your tasks, enjoying a film together, the fresh air on a walk and a part of all your interactions. Always by your side sending you love and support. They smile when you smile, they laugh when you laugh and share your lows. If you need clarity on a problem, ask them for guidance. As you move through this book you will develop your intuition, and the signs will become clearer but to start with ask a question and take notice of the words and thoughts that pop into your head or that seemingly random but helpful suggestion from someone or somewhere else? Remind yourself periodically throughout the day that you are open and ready to be loved and supported. If the idea of angels is new to you, this may feel strange but do it anyway. The more you do it, the more you can normalise it until you no longer need to remind yourself. Remember you can talk aloud or in your head they can hear you even in a busy room. Use your 'breath work for fear' exercise if you need it today. There is going to be some time at the end of the day to reflect on your first day of this spiritual journey, so give it your best effort so that you can reflect honestly!

Evening Contemplation

The Reset Button

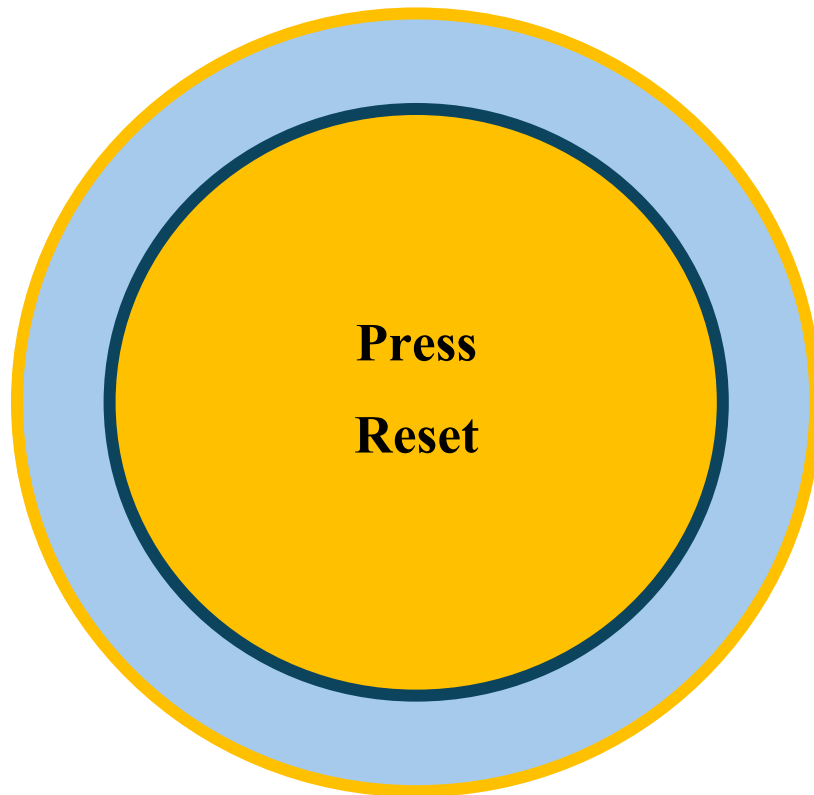

The Reset button is your last exercise today. Combined, the three exercises you have learnt are going to be a huge support to you as you move forward. You can use the Reset Button before sleeping, in the morning or anytime throughout your journey that you feel you need to restart with a clean slate. Your guardian angel and the universe are ready to acknowledge your intention to change and support you to reset at any moment that you choose.

The technique

The O in Open is your Reset button.

1. As a visual aid, look at the picture of the Reset Button and imprint this image on your mind
2. To create this energetically, draw a circle in the air just like when you drew shapes and letters in the air as a child, draw it in your mind's eye or touch the image in this book or screen. Choose an option that feels comfortable physically and emotionally for you.
3. Press the center and say 'From this moment, I am ready and open to receive love, healing and infinite possibilities'

It really is that easy! Human beings have a special gift for overcomplicating things that are very simple. Anyone that ever tries to sell you the idea that you need expensive ritual kits and complicated routines to alter the frequency that you vibrate on, is leading you down a false path. There is only one essential ingredient that you ever need, and that is positive intention through belief, and this image is a visual aid to help you practice.

Say It!

Feel It!

Believe It!

Exploring Circles, Openness & Synchronicity

There are no coincidences in the universe. Everything is happening exactly when it needs to even the difficult things. The emptiness of rock bottom is the most emotionally, spiritually and physically open door you can ever be standing in front of; all you need to do is walk through it! Even though it may be hard to embrace this right now, this is the absolute right time to fill this empty space with infinite possibilities! This course is all about learning to look at your world with a different perspective and today you are taking your first steps. To help you in this new direction, let's take a deeper dive into what being open really means from a spiritual point of view and why the letter O in Open is significant.

the dictionary definition of the word Open;

- Allowing passage or a view through an empty space
- Not closed or blocked
- To unfold or be unfolded
- To leave a space allowing access and vision.

The spiritual symbolism of the circle in the reset button - Why draw a circle?

- Circles represent oneness, something being whole, complete, no beginning or end, continuous
- Seen in ancient paintings and drawings, circles represent the sun and the moon, feminine and masculine; both are powerful symbols of energy seen in mythology and spirituality.
- Rings and circles are used to show commitment, devotion, unity, renewal and love such as wedding and eternity rings.
- In a Tarot deck, the number 0 which is a circle, represents the 'Fool' card which is the start of a journey to completion. Completion is called the 'World' card; this also has an image of a circle on the card.
- When the number 0 is added to any number multiple times it adds limitless value – 10,100,1000,10000 and so on
- Mathematically 0 is an empty number. We know that emptiness is not only a void but a space, and linking back to the definition of Open, we also know that a space allows a passageway through, access & vision and that spaces can also be filled. So if you add those two things together Openness creates limitless access & vision
- To repair an electronic device, it is entered into a state of reset represented by the number 0
- Finally, the circle is also the shape of the Life Doula Wheel and all the cycles of healing and progression.

Watch point

When doubt creeps in or you are struggling to feel open, look at the Reset Button, remind yourself that the circle represents infinite possibilities and even if you do not know all answers today, everything is connected and has meaning and purpose, take some angel breaths to release your doubts, press Reset and keep practicing!

Learning tip

As you open your heart and mind to this journey, synchronicities will begin to appear. Take notice of repeated songs, numbers, words, phrases, and circles everywhere! Begin a journal, make notes of dreams and anything that you have seen or heard that you keep thinking about. It's there for a reason and even if you do not know the answer today it will become clear as you Journey forward.

Why is being open an important first step towards healing?

1. Quite simply because you cannot do this alone! There are no gold stars for the person who never asks for help! As admirable as it is that you have made it this far by toughing it out alone, how has that really worked out for you so far? I can ask you this because for many years, I really believed that carrying my burdens alone made me a strong independent person and it did up to a point, but resilience from the human self can only carry you so far. I would look at the heavens and plea “I am so tired, I give everything I can to others, and I am still alone and failing at everything!” Surely someone up there must notice and send me some love, comfort and a lucky break? The truth is they did notice, and the response had been standing by my side all the time! You should feel proud of what you have overcome in the past but now is the time to move on from just surviving to thriving and creating a better future with your guardian angel by your side!

2. Opening your human heart and mind to unseen forces that are here to guide you, relies on trust and feeling your way through the process rather than interpreting what you are experiencing through your senses. Remember, we are all experiencing life differently. Not all of us can hear, see, speak or move with ease and although I would encourage you to make note of the messages given to you by your guides and angels through your senses, being able to explore your intuitive abilities and feel the process, is something that anyone can access regardless of physical condition and does not discriminate in this way. Intuition is not of human design. It has its origins in the love, wisdom, and memory of your ancient and timeless soul and spirit. It was given to us so that we may all connect with our divine selves and each other no matter what circumstances we find ourselves in. This is why regardless of separation and distance you can feel when a loved one needs you, but there is so much more you can do with this ability. One of the biggest blockages to being able to connect to this part of yourself and see beyond the challenges you face today, is the human minds need to have proof and validation before taking steps towards something new and especially one that requires you to feel rather than think. All the time you focus only on the outcome that you are expecting, you will miss the amazing miracles that are happening all around you and for you.

The veil of suspicion and fear that surrounds you can only be lifted by a leap of faith through the open door

Today's spiritual goals

Assessing Your first Day

I have already expressed what my experience of taking the leap towards this special connection felt like for me, but I want you to think about how it felt for you to start that conversation today and take the first steps towards reaching out for help from something you cannot see? Now that you know what today's learning goals were, how do you feel about them? Did you find it easy, difficult, strange, uplifting? Take some time to look back on your day. Did the day go better than usual, the same? How often did you actively connect and invite angelic support? It is ok to be honest. The goal is for this to become a nourishing and supportive experience and how you felt during and after the exercises is feedback for where you are at the start of this journey. I really hope you found it a positive experience but if you didn't It is important for you to know that this is ok, because any baby steps made towards healing are always recognised and celebrated by the universe, your guides and angels.

Introduction

We live in difficult and challenging times and the reasons for every person reading this book will be so varied, but the positive from the unhappiness that has brought you here, is that you have taken the decision to look beyond what life has taught you so far and see if there is another way to live. The first intentional pause today is to give yourself some praise for taking the leap and giving yourself the best chance of happiness. A prison cell with William Morris wallpaper and a crystal chandelier can make it seem bearable, but it is still a prison cell, and you are willing to see beyond the illusion, and this willingness is more progress than most people will ever make. The second intentional pause is to put the emergency brake on this fast train of negative thinking and get off at the next station. Whether you are a victim of a traumatic event or at the mercy of your own thoughts, this lesson aims to quieten the mind and make space for guidance to come through, your inner voice to come to the surface and redirection to occur.

Morning intention

Angel Prayers for a quiet mind

Building upon Angel prayer for connecting, you can now start asking for support and guidance on specific things. To help build this habit, you are going to start each day with an Angel prayer. This means that you are going to actively invite your Guardian Angel to help you with anything you need for the day ahead. When I was finding my job stressful, I would ask my Angel to come with me to work for guidance and support. Whenever I did not know what to do, an idea or clarity on my next steps would arrive swiftly. I also found it very comforting knowing that someone always had my back, especially in times of loneliness and isolation. You can ask your Guardian Angel for any support that you need, but this prayer today is specifically for quietening the mind, slowing down your train of thought and allowing guidance to come through making it easier to assess your decisions.

‘Hello, My Guardian Angel’

‘I would like to invite you to spend the day with me’

‘To support me to put my needs first when I am struggling today’

‘Please guide me to take a step back and pause when something doesn’t feel right

And only make decisions for everyone's highest good including myself’

Thank you

Now take a few deep breaths, reset if you need to and start your day.

The 5 Min Worry Allowance – for any time you need it today

Worrying and overthinking are addictive and habit forming and something that becomes a comfort zone. Surely if you have thought of every possible catastrophe or scenario that could go wrong, you will be fully prepared for any outcome? However, what starts out as an exercise in control over your situation quickly escalates beyond this point, until you are no longer in control. In extreme cases this may cause a person to stop leaving the home and living a full life. There is no point in telling someone in the grip of anxiety not to worry or stop thinking about things, but I also know it does not help to give these thoughts time to take root and grow.

I want you to have some short but effective exercises to do when you are having a difficult day. To add to the Angel Breath work for fear is the 5minute worry allowance. It is an exercise that allows you to acknowledge your anxiety and worries in a way that keeps you in control. Five minutes is plenty of time to list what is overwhelming you in that moment only, but not long enough for those feelings to escalate, therefore creating boundaries and with practice more self-discipline and control.

Let's Begin!

If you are someone whose thoughts and worries run away like a fast train on a downhill track, then this exercise will help you to reign them in, slow the train and give you some control back. Read through how to do the exercise before your day becomes too busy, then it is ready to go in your mind when you need it.

You will need - A notepad and pen or notebook on your phone, any clock/timer that you see can counting down the time.

The technique

1. If you find yourself suddenly feeling overwhelmed by your thoughts, feelings or the tasks you need to do today, Start the stopwatch on your phone or anything that counts down seconds and minutes that is available and write down/or speak into the microphone, what is on your mind right now.
2. This must be in list form only consisting of a few words per item, no long sentences. This will enable you to write quickly as it comes to you and keep to the points. Only write the list while the worries are flowing quickly.
3. There is no need to use the whole 5 minutes. It's an allowance like pocket money; it is just there so that you know you have plenty of time if you need it. Try your best to exercise discipline and not spend all the time allowance.
4. Stop the clock and stop listing when the thoughts start to slow – 3 seconds between thoughts is a good guide time for a stopping point. Remember - Slowing down is your stopping point.
5. Release the list to your Guardian angel to take away from your mind using the Angel Breath work for fear until your heart rate slows down.
6. You may use the 5 min worry allowance as often as required throughout the day.

Example 5 min Worry List

I am running out of time

What if I am late

I look ugly

People will stare at me

What if I can't remember what to say

I don't think I am good enough

I haven't got anything to wear

I need to go to mums as well

What if she's ill when I get there

What if she needs the doctor

How do I do that and go shopping

What if she gets worse and must go to hospital

I don't think I should go to the interview

It is best if I stay home

I think I will cancel

If you think that 5 Minutes is not enough time, the above example was taken from the list of a friend that I was helping with anxiety. It took her just 45 seconds to write as her fears were arriving at speed. After 45 seconds she began to slow down. I had instructed her to stop at the slowing point. The writing slowed because she was now beginning to move beyond the initial worry which was 'running out of time' and searching for new unrelated thoughts to come in and add on.

Watch point

These exercises are very effective if you do them regularly. Although I have provided clear instructions, it is ok to change the wording in a prayer or how you approach journalling your worries that works for you and your situation. Never worry about getting it wrong. The angel prayers and 5 min worry allowance are both designed to provide a feeling of support and that you are taking control.

Learning tip

The list and the breath work combined should only take a few minutes. The more you do them, the quicker you can act and deal with worry or panic before it gets a foot in the door. You may even find that in time; you can mentally list your fears without writing them down in busy environments and release them to your Guardian Angel to take from your mind. This exercise focuses on acknowledging fear, listing it to place it somewhere other than your mind if possible and releasing it quickly.

Optional add on for self-assessment

If you feel able to, please take note of the time you stopped the clock e.g. 60 secs, 2mins 5 secs etc, and anything that you can remember preceding the anxiety e.g. Time of day, tired or alert, a phone call, thinking about an upcoming event or even bumping into someone you haven't seen for a while.

What feedback can the worry list give you?

- If you perform the exercise several times, does the list repeat itself/common theme or is it random?
- Does the time used get shorter or longer?
- Does the day get better or worse when you list your fears?
- Do you notice the time of day affects you more?
- When you look at the first thing on your list, can you see a pattern of triggers that you can potentially plan and prepare for?
- When you read or listen back to the list, how does it make you feel about yourself?

Don't worry if you can't do this, or you are not sure what to think at this stage; it can be quite illuminating to look at the whole day's worry lists and see patterns and triggers. This exercise is not about shame or guilt but a way that you can feel less helpless and more proactive about dealing with anxiety and beginning to investigate the root of the feelings towards yourself, giving you some power back over the situation.

Motivational Moment

Reducing the time used from the 5 min allowance each time is a mini goal that you can work towards. At the end of the month, add up all the time you have saved and treat yourself to that time back and spend it doing something nice for yourself e.g. cinema, coffee with friends or a lazy day on the sofa with a good book. Enjoy it; you earned it!

Daytime focus

Practice taking an intentional pause

I would like you to spend today practicing stepping back from a problem that you have and give yourself permission to take time to think before you agree to something and slow down your mind from racing ahead. Everyone has a different set of circumstances but to give you an example from my life, I had a fear of letting people down at home and at work. I would worry that people would question my dedication and compassion if I said no to that extra shift at work or doing a task by myself that was really too much for one person, when I should have asked for help or said no. I thought it was selfish to think about what I wanted and put my needs first as a caregiver at work and at home. I needed to find the courage to say no and ask for help more often. Does this sound like you? I found that when I connected with my guardian angel at the start of the day, the intention of the prayer would be set in my mind and affirm I was always supported. I would say it to myself throughout the day as a reminder that I wasn't being selfish, because the habit of people pleasing is very hard to break. The best advice I can give is, if you don't know what to do, do nothing! If I wasn't sure what to do or say, I found it was best at that moment not to take any action at all. If you find yourself in a situation today where you feel pressured by others or your own mind, I would like you to make an excuse to leave the room or end that phone call and take a quick break from the situation. Delay a task or giving an answer to allow yourself time to think where your decisions are coming from? Remember; is it for everyone's highest good and that includes you! If you start to feel anxious, say the prayer and quickly list your fears (just in your mind if you need to) then release them, take a deep breath, and think again about what you really want to do or say. It takes a lot of effort to slow down your responses and think about your decision making. The more practice you put in, the easier it becomes, the more perspective you will gain, and the healthier it will feel.

Watch point

You may find people's reactions and attitudes towards you change as you start to take a step back. They may seem negative which may make you feel you need to revert to people pleasing but stay strong. Remember that the people who care about you won't have a problem with your new approach, and those that do will be thinking about how it affects them more than you. People are not always intentionally selfish, but it is their responsibility to find out where their fear-based responses are coming from and not yours! Within the course of transformation, you will be delving deeper into triggers and patterns of behaviour, but for now you are just acknowledging things need to change, slowing things down and making some space in your mind for this to happen.

Evening Contemplation

What does happiness mean to you?

I would like you to take a moment to write down or just think about what you think is making you unhappy and what you need in your life to become happy? If you do not know then say to yourself 'I do not know what I need to become happy' and do not feel bad about this or envy the person who never doubts what they need, 'I don't know' is the most honest and open answer you can give. Remember openness allows for infinite possibilities, and you have more chance of achieving happiness with infinite possibilities than someone with a clear fixed idea. I know which odds I would prefer?

Desert Island visualisation

We do not all have the privilege of time or the financial means to create distance from our problems, but the power of your imagination and connection to the universe can take you anywhere that you want to go at any time. This short, guided visualisation invites you to imagine a peaceful desert island where physical limits and daily stresses vanish, replaced by tranquility, safety, and abundance. It encourages reflection on feelings of happiness, desires to stay or leave, and what you value or wish to bring to this serene place?

Learning Tip

This visualisation is purposefully short so that even after the first time of reading, the imagery will be imprinted. Read this through and then close your eyes to see the images and access the feelings the words invoke.

Let's begin!

Close your eyes.

Before a single thought can form, you feel warm sand between your toes.

You are aware there is no longer the sound of hustle and bustle from the people on the street outside, or traffic going by. All you can hear is the gentle rhythmic sound of waves rolling back and forth.

There is a warm breeze on your face.

In this place within the conscious mind, you can open your eyes and look around, and what you see takes your breath away. You stand in awe of the unspoilt white sand and endless turquoise ocean.

To your left there are clusters of palm trees swaying in the breeze and the distant sounds of tropical birds.

Under the trees, there is a strong shelter already built if you need it.

You know that although you are completely alone, you are safe here.

In this place, there are none of the everyday worries that you once had. No bills to pay, jobs to go to, career ladders to climb, no family or friends to ask you questions, no expectations or responsibilities, no mirrors to check how you look, television or social media. It is just you, the sand and the ocean.

Everything that you need to feel peaceful and happy is all around you.

You do not feel hungry or thirsty, but there are plentiful fresh fruits and fish if you want them.

There is no one to witness you succeed or fail, except for yourself

Time has no meaning and days roll by with endless blue skies and tranquility.

Relax and stay in this moment for as long as you can, take some deep breaths and when you are ready, ask yourself these questions

- Does this place feel peaceful to you? What makes it feel so peaceful?
- How do you feel about being here alone? Is it exactly what you need right now, or do you feel lonely?
- Would you like to stay here, or go back?
- If you could stay here but bring anything or anyone to your island, what would it be and why?
- Who or what are you happy to leave behind?
- Do you think a place like this would allow you space to think clearly about what you want?

Your answers may look and sound like this?

- If I felt less pressure at work and at home, I think I could be happier
- I don't want to be alone, but I need time away from everyone to think
- I am unhappy with my home environment. I would like to stay in this peaceful place but bring my friends here to experience it with me.
- I feel lonely at home and unable to be myself, but on this island, I feel no pressure to fit in. I feel free to be myself and happier even though nobody is here?

Learning tip

You may find it helpful to record yourself reading the visualisation through. Read it slowly and clearly pausing to give yourself time to think about the questions. Play the recording back to yourself, close your eyes, and listen. If it feels weird listening to your own voice, try not to let this stop you. Who better to ask you about your own happiness than yourself?

Introducing Duality

Taking some time to think about these questions; may bring some clarity about the source of some of the negative feelings towards yourself. Is it your “life” or the “lifestyle” you are living that is the problem, there is a big difference! Duality is being able to separate your unhappiness and perceived failures within the human experience from you as a spiritual being, with a soul that exists in a constant state of love, creation and renewal that only views your challenges as opportunities to change and return to your true self. This understanding when realised will elevate every experience in your life and completely change your outlook.

Is it possible that if you could change your reality to a more peaceful one, you could feel more positive towards yourself and give life a second chance? Do this visualisation anytime you feel crowded either by people, a situation or just your own thoughts, and visit this peaceful space that is always available to you and clear your mind.

1.Peace before happiness

Permanent happiness is the Holy Grail that we all seek, and most fail to find. The reason that we fail is because happiness is a temporary emotion that can only exist if the conditions that we have decided it needs to thrive are maintained. Much like a bird in a cage, happiness will fade and die if it is not fed, given light and oxygen to sustain it, but the moment you give anything a label, even happiness it will come with an expectation of how it should look and feel and how it can be achieved. Parameters are set that need to be maintained, and an outcome is automatically attached to it. The Holy Grail may be the perfect job, an ideal partner and loving relationship or dream home. For me it was all these things, but I also wished that everyone around me and even the wider world would be happier so that I could feel this way too. My happiness has always been bound by that of others, but human beings and the world in general are very unpredictable beasts, and this throws up uncertainty, and we all know this. Deep down every person has a worry that even if they capture the illusive happiness it will slip through their fingers. Will the person I love stay and grow old with me, will the company I work for prosper or go out of business, will I be replaced by someone younger; will my family and I always have good health or you may be feeling dejected because you are not moving any closer to having anything worth losing? Happiness is as fragile and unpredictable as catching dust in the air, but have you considered that the answer may be to stop chasing happiness and instead change the goal to finding peace first and experience happiness growing organically as a byproduct from this and finding you? My personal journey of self-discovery has shown me how to find peace through reconnecting and remembering my divine self-first that in turn connects me to all of creation and everything else is second to this. Of course, there are things that bring me happiness like everyone else, but these moments add to my human experience rather than define it and that is the difference! The same person or situation can make me feel gloriously happy one day and equally unhappy the next, but I can be at peace with it either way because I know that happiness is a temporary emotion, but peace is a permanent state of being and this helps me to always feel grounded and safe in this world.

2. What does Peace mean?

The dictionary definition of peace is; freedom from disturbance and a feeling of tranquility. Humans will often use the word "peace" to describe a time of quiet or stillness in a hectic world or the end of conflict and war, but this means peace can only exist if external factors allow a state of peace to occur. The spiritual meaning of peace is the opposite of this.

Peace is the unbroken internal state of love without end, that allows you to always feel held in the arms of God both here on earth and in heaven where fear, loss and pain cannot exist. It is the condition of being one and whole, that once fully realised exists continuously and can never be altered by external factors, because it resides within you. Peace is having everything taken away, yet knowing you still have everything.

- Learn to press pause, stop and change direction when something doesn't feel right
- Understand the importance of moving away from obsessive thinking to gain perspective on your situation and giving yourself permission to do this.
- Explore what you think happiness is?

Assessing your day

How do you feel at the end of this lesson? Are you beginning to question what you think happiness is and what could make you happy? In the beginning of a healing journey and spiritual awakening, it can become very confusing as you deconstruct your life. You will be asked to reevaluate everything you know to be true, and, in its place, you may be left with more questions. If at any point you feel uncertain about what your new future may look like if you choose to embrace a complete redirection, the one thing you do know for sure is that nothing in the past has helped you to know peace and joy today, but your future is not fixed, and anything not fixed in place can be moved, and movement creates change, so is an unhappy past that's fixed in memory really worth holding onto? All these lessons are aimed at bringing out your potential and any time you question anything, even guidance it is expansion and the first steps of you beginning not to accept the status quo, it is time to detach yourself from the matrix!

Summary of Pause & Reflect

- Stopping or just taking a moment to pause and reflect on whether there is a different way to live your life is one of the hardest things to do. Give yourself credit for allowing change to occur
- Taking a step back from your problems can give you better clarity – allow yourself time to do this!
- People who care about you will support your choices
- Are you allowing external factors to affect you internally?
- Is it time to reassess what you think will make you happy and move towards peace instead?
- Learning to separate the constant challenges of the human experience from the soul which exists in a constant state of love, creation, and renewal will help you.
- Your second tool kit contains – Angel prayer for a quiet mind, 5min worry allowance and a guided visualisation for thinking about happiness

Hero Moment

There is a deeper part of you that knows what is best for you in every area of your life, but it has been drowned about by the dominant voice of your fears for a long time. It is true that your fears have been keeping you safe but also preventing you from exploring and growing. It takes a lot of courage to leave this comfort zone. Today you started the process of making a space for the quiet, calm voice of your soul to be felt and heard. Stay within this lesson and repeat the exercises as often as needed. Move on to 'The Fight of Your Life' when you feel ready.

Introduction

This lesson focuses on helping you find the motivation to start the process of birthing joy and sustaining it. It may sound contradictory to align the words going to war and succeeding with a spiritual journey to enlightenment, but if you prepare today, as if you are going into battle, you will give yourself the best chance of healing and success. You have great resilience and empathy when it comes to the needs of others but struggle to show this towards yourself. This is a journey that involves leaving your comfort zone and releasing everything that is holding you back. As you emerge from the bunker that is your current mindset and limiting beliefs, you will come under attack from your own doubts and fears and those of others, as you shed what no longer serves you. This can very quickly push you backwards and make you want to retreat to the relative safehouse; that is the life you know well. If you choose not to continue past this point in the course, you will never know what you could have achieved but you can go back to knowing exactly what you will be doing and how you will feel when you wake up tomorrow, and even though you are unhappy at least there are no surprises with that, right? The fight of your life can be the moment that you finally push yourself beyond your fears and light that small spark of change. It is a moment to think about yourself first before others and what you may need to support yourself on this journey. If helping others is something that is important to you, being temporarily selfish by stepping back physically or emotionally to support yourself today will place you in a much stronger position to help people tomorrow, without draining your last reserves, Preparation, preparation, preparation!

Watch point

I wanted to give you an early heads up that motivation has turned out to be a more complex topic to cover than I first anticipated. But as I started to write, it was clear that I could not make any short cuts in what a critical step in building confidence and preparing the ground for road ahead. There is a lot to read, but as always, it is broken down into sections to navigate at your own pace. I write this as someone who has struggled with mental overload and anxiety myself, so please push through, pause and re-read if you need to. Your healing really matters to me.

Morning Intention

Angel prayer for anchoring to your healing goals

This prayer will help bring your thoughts, intentions, and energy back into your centre when they start to move away from the healing goals you are focused on. We live in a very noisy and demanding world, and it is very easy to become distracted, disheartened and pulled off track by the things and people around us. All the prayers within acceptance are designed to be simple, short, but effective so that they can be easily integrated into any moment that you need quickly. Accessing spiritual support does not require setting aside large chunks of time, if you can that is great but think of an emergency doctor who needs support in the midst of chaos with only a few seconds to spare, do you think they would get any less support than the person who has hours to prayer? I often refer to this as spirituality on the go or bitesize bliss!

‘Hello, my Guardian Angel’

Help me to remember my true divine self in this moment,

And connect to the part of me that does not fear change,

Help me to see that I deserve joy and love,

And moving forward is the only way to achieve this,
I accept your love and support as we journey together,
I remember that I am never alone,
'All my love & thank you'

Learning Tip

If you feel someone or something is pulling you away from your healing right now and time is too short to set aside for the full angel prayer, this shortened version is easy to memorise. It forms an effective affirmation that will motivate and anchor you quickly! I often write short affirmations or prayers on small revision cards. These can be placed anywhere that you access multiple times a day, such as the inside of your phone cover or wallet as a little pocket comforter.

'Help me to remember my divine self-first
I do not fear change
For I am never alone'

Watch point

Don't be afraid of prayer, it is not about religion or asking a supreme being to make things better. Prayer is the act of connecting to something that unlocks a deep forgotten part of you that knows you are always loved and held, and you have all the answers within you. It is the power of your intention to connect from your heart that matters more than the time you have or the place that you do it.

Finding Your Motivation for the journey

To accompany the Angel Prayer for Anchoring, I would like you to start thinking about what will motivate you to take your first proactive steps towards change. If you have some time before you start your day, I would like you to run through the prayer for anchoring and then take a few centering breaths. Today's mission is to source and collect your motivation for the healing journey ahead. The strength of your motivation is the driving force that will help you stick to your goals, especially when the going gets tough or doubt creeps in, so make it a good one!

Ask yourself these questions:

- What has led me to this point of change?
- What needs to change?

- Will changing help others
- What will I gain/what's in it for me?

Your answers may sound something like this:

- Nothing I have tried so far has made me happy, I am running out of options and hope
- I feel like I am letting everyone down, I know I can do better but it's hard
- I want to know what joy and success feels like
- I want to make my family proud
- I want to find out what my soul's purpose is/why am I here?

If the answers do not arrive swiftly, it is ok. Some people may be reading this book already knowing what they want to change in their lives but need help to make this happen, while others may be so overwhelmed that they cannot even see this far. If you are not sure, this is the ideal time to call upon your guardian angel to help you. Remember, the first two lessons of this course taught you that not knowing the answers is not only ok but creates greater opportunities for change and loving guidance to come towards you. Your Guardian Angel will already be aware that this book has found its way to you and what you need to know but clarify that you would like their help over the coming days to find your motivation for healing. Most people do not realise that their world mirrors back their intentions and energies; this means if you believe that joy is unattainable, then this is what you will continue to experience. If like I once did, you constantly tell yourself, you are alone, that nobody can help or that you don't deserve it, your world will affirm your views and feelings. Asking to be shown the way forward by clarifying your needs has three positive outcomes. Firstly, it initiates a dialogue that begins to change the narrative you have created about what is possible for yourself; second it requires you to be vulnerable and trust the process which is one of the keys to transformation and third, it causes a chain reaction that allows positive energy to flow more freely. Becoming open to help and guidance causes a shift in the energies within you and lowers the barrier that you subconsciously created to protect yourself. This in turn opens a channel that allows for opportunities and miracles to come through. The intuitive messages, little angelic nudges of inspiration that in the past you would ignore or disregard as pointless, will now reach you and appear more obvious helping you to connect the dots. It could be a message from someone who wants to reconnect with you, an overlooked career opportunity, a creative project that springs to mind, reminders of a past hobby, and the feeling it gave you or reading about someone else's life that inspires you. It really could be anything, so keep your heart and mind open to everything. Make note of a repeated thought or idea; it is there for a reason, so start that conversation.

Watch point

Don't get de-motivated trying to motivate! At this stage it will be normal to find it hard to ask yourself these questions. It has probably been quite some time since you last talked to yourself in a positive and constructive way. It can take some time to get used to asking yourself about your wants and needs rather than putting yourself down. This is an obstacle for you to overcome and a good time to let your guardian angel guide you to see your potential for change and find your why?

Daytime focus

The beating heart of your motivation

The Heart Chakra is the point where your human self meets your spiritual self, the real essence of you; it is the bridge between these two worlds. It is the soul and inner child that is creative, wise, and loving and does not fear taking a leap of faith. My philosophy as a life doula is built around helping people understand that your human and spiritual self can co-exist in harmony and benefit from the learning experiences each will bring to the other for a more peaceful and successful life. This Heart chakra affirmation is a simple and quick way to integrate spirituality into your daily life. In the beginning, your motivation for wanting to change your life may be driven by your minds fear-based emotions and decision making, which is often chaotic and self-destructive such as loneliness, sense of lack or low self-worth but the engine that drives authentic, grounded and meaningful motivation is your soul. The action of physically or visually connecting the heart space with your thoughts and words, will start the process of activating this area, your intuitive abilities, creative and loving thoughts, past wisdom and memories all held within your soul that resides within your Heart chakra.

Powerful Heart Chakra Affirmation

If you are physically able, I would like you to hold one or both hands in the heart area of your body which is also known as the Heart Chakra or visualise yourself doing this. Remembering the bitesize bliss and spirituality on the go approach, say this short but powerful affirmation to yourself with whatever time you have available. You can spend a few seconds multiple times throughout the day or sit in the moment for longer if you wish; you can control how you integrate healing into your day; it doesn't matter, just do it!

The complexity of Motivation

Part 1. What is motivation?

Motivation is the turning wheel of determination and willpower that will create healing momentum and purpose. You may associate motivation with being driven to achieve big goals or motivational speakers coaching business leaders and athletes to become winners in their field, but we all need motivation even in the seemingly mundane of everyday life. We need motivation to take care of ourselves with exercise and healthy eating and meet our fulfillments and responsibilities whether that is at work or home, but there is a huge difference between going through the motions of life on autopilot as many of us are guilty of doing and using every single moment no matter how insignificant it may seem, as an opportunity to become the best version of ourselves. At some point you have lost hope that anything can change, or you feel that you have very few choices left in life and when this happens your motivation, willpower and determination will be at its lowest point. Change takes a lot of effort and as part of the process of undoing years of limiting beliefs, you need all the help you can get! There is a part of you that has an abundance of motivation, never doubts that anything is possible and has never stopped believing in you, and that is your soul! If you are starting this journey from a dark period in your life, relying exclusively on the mind, with its internal battles, to power you, will slow and even stop progress, but if you use your soul that is without fear as the engine driving your goals, it will sustain you for as long as you need it to.

Learning tip

The goal is to find something that inspires and motivates you to want to stay on the course, but we are all starting this journey from a different place, if you have been struggling to motivate yourself with even the small everyday tasks of life and this is stopping you from moving forward, then start here. Small motivations will eventually grow and spread into big dreams and realising your full potential. We often lose our motivation through the roles that we have played for many years and find it hard to reconnect with who we were before. You may be a parent, caregiver or feel restricted in some way, but every small step in this course or the simple act of thinking about your wellbeing and motivation during the day will light a spark deep within you and that chain reaction that links thoughts with ideas. You will begin making connections between yourself and your internal and external world, likes and dislikes, environment, and relationships and what you really need in your life to find peace. So be honest and patient with yourself and start where you are at, to give yourself the best start!

Part 2. Recognising motivational Blocks

Procrastination

There is something that is holding you back from making positive decisions and starting something new, and it didn't appear overnight. It is the culmination of weeks, months, even years experiencing apathy/mild depression, confusion or brain fog, low self-belief/worth, anxiety, exhaustion or stress from internal and external factors. This all comes under the umbrella of procrastination. It can be triggered by a single traumatic event that you have never recovered from, or a long history of setbacks and disappointments leading back to childhood. Depending on how long it has been allowed to run the show, procrastination may be temporary or something that holds you back continuously. The roots of this book are based on my own experiences, and procrastination is something that held me back whenever I wanted to change direction in my life and try something new, but the seeds of my procrastination in adulthood had been sewn well before this, in my teenage years. I would overthink my options, unable to prioritise and trust my intuition on my next steps and allow the opinions of others to affect my confidence towards taking any action. I would go through long periods of indecision and apathy becoming frustrated by my lack of confidence and inaction, then leap headfirst into a disastrous situation to try and activate something within myself. This resulted in returning to the habit of over-thinking and delaying tactics before trying again. The aim here is to activate action but in a healthier balanced way that is sustainable to stop this pattern repeating itself and allow motivation to move forward. Within the next course of transformation, I will guide you through the process of doing your own shadow work to uncover the root cause of everything you have experienced, but acceptance is focusing on acknowledging the need for change, believing you can change and taking your first proactive steps towards this.

System Overload

Some of the most empathetic, generous, creative and gifted people that I know have overthought and self-sabotaged their way to rock bottom. Honest self-reflection takes time so If you find difficult for to put yourself in this category, think of someone else that you know, a family member, friend, colleague or a famous actor or sports star on the news that experienced a breakdown or worse, that shocked you, when they had so much to offer the world and themselves. Of course there are always other contributory factors, but a common theme among people who try to live up to a standard or expectation professionally and socially, is the constant stream of self-critical thoughts, catastrophising, and the accompanying rollercoaster of emotions, all competing for time and space within the mind. This will eventually lead to the system slowing down or not being able to function at all, making motivation impossible!

The best analogy I can use is to compare your mind to a computer. A laptop for instance will struggle or crash when too many files are opened due to the device running out of available resources. This is resource depletion known as;

RAM exhaustion - The computer's short-term memory

When the memory required by all the open files exceeds the physical RAM available. The system must resort to moving data between the 'short-term memory and long-term memory' (the hard drive) back and forth. This drastically slows down the system and can lead to unresponsiveness and crashes.

CPU Overload – The Central Processing Unit

As the number of tasks required by the 'brain of the computer' increases, it must work harder to manage everything simultaneously. If the demand exceeds the capability of the CPU the system may freeze

OS- Instability of the operating system

The 'main body of the computer' needs resources to manage all the open files. Too many files open depletes resources and strains the whole system leading to instability

Part 3. Solutions

System Check

When a laptop or phone is struggling to perform a task that it has done many times before, nobody I know ever takes the risk of ignoring it and it can even induce panic, because you need your device to be at its best to help you manage your busy life! At the first sign of a problem you would act, run a virus check, close unnecessary programs, reboot it, perform a reset, and generally do everything you can think of to prevent things from getting worse and repair it, so why don't we apply this same logic towards ourselves?

When you are struggling to motivate and focus, stop pushing your system and trying so hard! To help you step away from frustration and attachment to any emotional situations, outcomes or goals you are not meeting, think of yourself as a computer and perform a system check

Summary

Device / System	Motivation / You
When pushed to its limit, performance drops: the system slows, freezes, or becomes unresponsive.	You need strong motivation to move your life forward. When life feels like “too many tabs open,” it’s normal for motivation to dip. Feeling stuck is a sign of overload, not failure.
If demand keeps exceeding capacity, the device may crash or reboot to restore stability.	If the pressure keeps going, your mind and body may switch into protection mode (shutdown, numbness, tears, avoidance). That’s not a weakness; it’s a signal you need recovery, not more willpower.
Too many files/programs open at once overwhelms the whole system’s ability to manage and prioritise tasks.	Too many worries, expectations, or self-critical thoughts can crowd out clarity. When you reduce the mental “noise,” it becomes easier to prioritise and choose the next helpful step.
Recovery approach: close what you don’t need, reduce workload, and restart/reset so resources free up.	Recovery approach: start with kindness and small wins. Identify one block (a habit, trigger, or harsh inner voice), loosen it, and take one doable action today. Momentum returns when the load drops, and you prove to yourself you can move one small step at a time when you practice self-care.

What is in your Tool Kit?

- Angel Breath work for fear – The Open Door– Relaxes the nervous system/takes pressure off the system allows for a reset moment
- Angel prayer for a quiet mind – Leave the Mind Behind – Slows decision making when something doesn't feel right to prevent you continuously overloading your system
- 5min Worry allowance - Leave the Mind Behind - Slows the spread of the virus of negative thoughts
- Desert island visualisation – Leave the Mind Behind – What is essential and non-essential in this moment/what do you really need to function peacefully
- Reset Button – The Open Door– After you have performed your checks – restart your system, fresh start with renewed purpose starting to integrate self-care

Learning link

In Leave the Mind |Behind, I introduced to you the theme of duality which is learning to separate the human experience from the soul's experience. Procrastination, anxiety, addictions and so on are all challenges faced by your human self alone. The more you can start connecting to your soul and living your life more from this space, the effect the challenges you face reduces dramatically as your perspective changes, and you begin to loosen your grip on expectations and outcomes.

Learning tip

The exercises above are all designed to assist your human self to understand the effect of the mind has on your wellbeing and ability to function. The aim is to help you clear your mind to allow space for new thought processes and connections to be created. Alongside the recommended system check, remember to practice the Heart Chakra affirmation and spend time thinking about this area whenever you can, after all the soul is the hard drive of your computer that stores all your past life memories!

Anchor your Motivation

Although motivation helps us to move forward with purpose, it is not fixed. Motivation can be exciting, creative, emotional, but often changeable, increasing and decreasing with the ebb and flow of life, but an anchor point is non-negotiable. It must remain fixed, unchanging, dependable, and immovable. Like the word anchor suggests It should be something that you can return to time and time again that will never let you down. It must have substance and weight, enough to ground you in any storm. When I look back now, I am almost embarrassed that I couldn't commit to self-improvement for me. My motivation was to be seen, loved, and validated by someone I thought equally cared for me. I had read that if you stop thinking about that person and work on finding your true self, they will be energetically pulled back to you, and so that was what I did. I was experiencing challenges at work and at home and clinging to the idea that someone else could make everything better. The irony of it all was the longer it took for my "savior" to return the more time It gave me to really look inward. I started to connect to my soul and spirit and look at the world around me with a renewed perspective, until one day I no longer wanted or needed them to come back. Everything in my world had changed for the better without them! I thought I was failing because I had never had a successful or healthy relationship with anyone, but my biggest failure was that I had never even had that with myself! How could I expect someone else to love me if I couldn't love myself first? Of course, none of this would have been possible without anchoring my healing to my Guardian Angel. This leap of faith was the best decision I have ever made. All through the highs and lows of wishing and waiting, the consistent love and guidance from my Guardian Angel prevented me from drifting away into the waves of disappointment once again and helped me to see opportunities to heal and the blue skies and sandy beaches of change, that were waiting if I just opened my eyes to look.

Watch Point 1.

Never anchor to a person or situation because these are not fixed or certain. As we know, the one constant in life is change. Nothing is forever and over time; you will suffer grief, the loss of a person, a pet, a job, a relationship, and a way of life. If you anchor to something that could potentially end at any time, it will jeopardise your journey. Remember- strong, dependable, and immovable!

Why Anchoring to your Guardian Angel super boosts your healing journey

- They have been by your side through all your lifetimes and will never leave you
- No matter what you do your guardian angel will provide a level of devotion, non-judgement and honesty with pure love, on a level that most humans struggle to perceive
- They have a deep understanding of your soul's history, and the way you process experiences and information and relate to people. This makes them experts at guiding you.
- They can listen to your worries, ideas, and questions 24/7; they are never off duty!
- You can never wear their patience thin, tire or bore them or push them away.
- Even the most cherished, supportive and loving person you know could not give you all this forever, but your Guardian Angel can and does!

Watch Point 2.

There will be a moment when you have been trying hard to move forward, and you are making progress, when sadness, doubt, anger and frustration seemingly appear out of nowhere. This is not a step back, but part of the process of releasing your past. Rather than pushing them away so that you can get back on track, pause and make note of the feelings and if a particular memory or person is associated with this. Fear and doubt will accompany the process of letting something or someone go, and it would be very strange if you did not feel some emotion about this. Acknowledging this will not push your healing backwards! Sit with the feelings for a short while and use it to motivate you to never feel this way again, release and anchor your fears to your Guardian Angel. They can help you bear this burden, but you must acknowledge the feelings before you release them as part of the process of transformation.

Today's spiritual goals

- Plan like you would an expedition - what do I need to progress/what may prevent this
- Form the habit of grounding/anchoring for the ups and downs of a healing journey

- Finding motivation through self-doubt, procrastination and overload, recognising the signs and breaking the habit
- Staying the course even it seems like nothing is happening

Assessing your day and a motivating message from me to you

How did today's main task of finding motivation go for you? I hope that you now feel you can start making changes and moving your life forward one step at a time. When I began writing about motivation, I had no idea how challenging it would be for me personally and how linked to my emotions it had become. Remembering the pain of my past and how difficult it was to motivate myself to change, even creating this course I have often found my motivation challenged by the enormity of the task as it grows and I think of all of you as I write. But I can tell you It will all be worth it!

You may find that your motivation and commitment are tested when the end goal is one that you cannot see. Athletes can push themselves beyond their physical and mental limits because they know what is at the end if they succeed, but there is no medal or certificate of completion at the end of a spiritual journey. Playing the long game isn't appealing when you are in pain. I get it! I have stood where you are now, but the quick fixes don't work, which is why you are here. There is a mountain to climb and it will need effort and determination to get there, but what I can tell you is that once you start putting into practice the guidance in this course , you will very quickly notice a shift in your energy, finding courage and a strength of belief that happiness is waiting for you that you cannot explain. I remember very clearly that after just one week of committing every moment of everyday, to talking to my Guardian Angel, asking for their help when I needed it, quieting my mind so that I could see their signs and listen to my inner voice and stepping away from people pleasing, everything changed. I felt completely different, lighter in my energy and a confident feeling that everything was going to be ok. I didn't know how things were going to change; I just knew that they would. By the end of this course, your ability to anchor from within will be so strong and certain that nothing will be able to move you from your center, your purpose and your light. For now, it doesn't matter how you start or why, just start! Personal experience has taught me that whatever it takes to get a person to step away from the edge of life and start the journey back to themselves is a good thing. Even if it is for someone else or seems like a superficial reason, but it motivates you, then go with it. If you commit to positive change, then positive change will happen, and I guarantee the home of your motivation will change as it organically evolves from fear to love.

Summary of The Fight of your Life

- If you take some time to prepare by finding a strong motivation to push you along, identifying that you need to clear space in your mind to focus, you are more likely to feel inspired to continue

- Prayer is not about religion or looking outside of yourself. Prayer is all about you! It activates the deepest parts of yourself, your soul, and spirit to find the answers you need.
- If you are a people pleaser and spend a lot of time thinking of others, it is ok to be selfish and bring your focus and attention back to yourself, your wants and needs to help you start your healing journey.
- The soul is the engine room of true motivation. Taking time to acknowledge the heart chakra will help you to focus on the home of your soul and start thinking and creating more from this area rather than the human mind that can be easily scattered and distracted.
- Don't ignore it when you are struggling. Stop and think about what you need in this moment, self-assess, and act! To keep the positive energy flowing.
- If after the exercises, you are still struggling to find a strong motivation, it is ok to start small and watch this grow into something amazing.
- At the beginning of this journey, your Guardian Angel will fill the role as your anchor until you have learned to anchor from within. They will never leave you or let you down. They will always ground you safely when you need it.
- The more progress you make on the course, the more you will remember your soul, and the more your soul will become the anchor that helps you make grounded intuitive decisions.
- Whatever it takes to get you to step away from the edge and through the doors into spiritual rehab go with it! As you heal and change, so will your goals!
- Third tool kit – Angel prayer for anchoring & Heart Chakra affirmation

Hero Moment

You are so used to pushing through and holding everything together even when you are running on empty, leaving little time and energy to think about what you really need. This lesson requires a lot of honesty and discipline to recognise when you need to press pause and assess how you are doing and let go of some of your responsibilities. With every step you are clearing a path for motivation to move through and remember even if it feels like nothing is happening behind the scenes; little miracles are being created by your intention to change, and you did that! The next lesson is dedicated to helping you understand what and who motivates your choices, but recognising when you need time to integrate new ideas is a very healthy and helpful skill to develop, so feel free to repeat this lesson if you need to before moving on.

How will following this course change my life?

Through your new understanding of God, eternal love and connection, you will no longer experience grief, loss or any sense of lack. You will not fear the words or actions of others as you become confident and secure in your choices and forgive others for theirs. You will experience a profound sense of peace knowing that you are deeply loved and held and nothing can change this. Anything is possible for you now!

How do I connect to my Divine Holy child?

By allowing the mother aspect of God to nurture, protect and guide you to Birth Your Christ self. This means allowing Jesus to show you how to love and heal yourself and others and know only joy. From this moment on you remember that you are a holy child of God and shine as the son does.

What is my Divine self?

Your divine self does not experience limitations in the way the human self does, because it is the wonderful combination of your inner child that follows joy without fear and your timeless soul that holds the richness of ancient knowledge and wisdom, and lastly it is your connection to the whole of creation made possible by your divine mother & father as God and the love that they feel for you as their Holy Child.

Why is this happening to me?

You are deeply unhappy because you are not following your soul/life plan. The universe and your soul are performing an intervention taking the form of this moment of crisis also known as a dark night of the soul. Its purpose is to initiate a drastic life altering choice to take a leap of faith, change direction and seek a new truth and become who you were always meant to be. The human experience alone is not enough to sustain you any longer, but you will keep going until the universe intervenes. Your soul is asking to be nourished and healed. This happening to you because the time is now!

About You?

Something has happened to cause you to question your value in the world. You feel lonely, trapped, isolated at times and you are beginning to lose hope that your life can change. You are empathetic, sensitive, kind, a dreamer, imaginative, curious and always seeking the truth, but you are also an overthinker, low in confidence/self-worth, you may gravitate to codependent relationships lacking in reciprocity, always giving a lot but receiving very little in return.

Ok, so what do I need to change?

Strip away the limiting beliefs of the ego, Heal your past wounds and rebuild stronger to reveal your souls purpose and unlimited potential for love and peace

Where is a good place to start my healing?

Understanding the concept of duality. This is recognising that you have a human self and a divine self that coexist but experience life completely differently. Learning that each perspective can nourish the other is the key to finding Balance.
